The H.M. Customs Office is of the Inter-War Art Deco style whereas the adjacent residence reflects more the Inter-War Mediterranean style. The office has a rendered front facade and parapet which screens a long tiled roof. The building sits right on the front boundary with the footpath. Stepped rendered architraves accentuate the double entry doors which are recessed into a small porch and raised up four steps to form a plinth. Over the doors a highlight adopts a "Union Jack" motif with its intersecting mullions. A single double hung window sits either side of the entry. The windows have small mullions forming a narrow margin of glass around the edge, which intersects to form a square in each corner of the sash. The office is basically a long rectangular building behind which is a warehouse or bond-store. Although the corrugated iron roofed bond-store is rendered and painted to match the main building it has a much older style and form and possibly pre-dates the office. Inside the office are 'standard issue' Commonwealth Government office interiors and furniture. Some early photographs are displayed on the walls which illustrate its original setting etc. The adjacent residence is of painted, rendered brickwork, orange tiled roof and has an arched entry porch giving its predominant Mediterranean character which is in contrast to the adjacent office. This may suggest separate times for construction albeit during the Inter-War period. The rendered walls and arches of the residence have a certain blandness possibly indicating a loss of some of its former detailing during latter maintenance alterations or "modernisation" when re-rendering and re-painting may have occurred. The combination masonry pier and timber picket fence along the street boundary is a recent addition.
